Society Bulletin Says.

Rev. Dr. Wallace Radcliffe is announced to begin a series of Sunday evening sermons in New York Avenue Presbyterian Church this evening on the general topic, "Great Historical Revivals."

This series is being given by Dr. Radcliffe, it is announced, in recognition of the rising tide of evangelism, not only in this country, but also in the nations that are today at war.

The sermons are intended to present portraits of men and scenes in the history of the church that have become historic and significant. In connection with the meetings the music, it is said, when the service Sunday morning file the church that have become historic and significant. Campaign Started in Kentucky Has Commanding Officer of Thetis Re-Spread to Many Other . States.

How "moonlight schools" are decreasng illiteracy in some parts of the United States is told by Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart, founder of the moonlight sent out by the Survey Press Service. "Amusing, indeed, have been the varihave imagined them to be schools where children studied and played and scampered on the green like fairies in the moonlight. Others have believed them to be ideal courting schools, where lovers strolled arm in arm, quoted poetry, and told the old, moon. Others have speculated upon their being schools where moonshiners, youthful and aged, were instructed in the most scientific methods of extracting the juice from the corn, and, at the same time, the most secretive, to prevent government interference."

What They Really Are.

It was in the obscure position of county superintendent of Rowan county Turned Topsy-Turvy by European that Mrs. Stewart began four years ago the work that has carried the alphabet and spelling book into the darkest cor-ners of her state. Today she is presi-dent of the Kentucky illiteracy com-mission, author of "Country Life Readers" and has the satisfaction of seeing her work conied in many other Supposing that the Germans conquer, even under such a circumstance, I am quite certain, the Germans will experience enormous difficulties in building up an export trade. To be sure, if they are victorious they may impose treaties on the conquered countries of great advantage to themselves. They could, for example, compel the allies to give to German supply houses the right to compete on public improvements, or they could even demand that German firms be given the preference on such orders. Such demands actually occurred not so long ago in Rumania. in Switzerland and elsewhere. It must be admitted that it would be possible to compel the allied governments to make such concessions, but it would be extremely difficult to force private institutions, almost as important, to yield to such demands.

A report received from the commanding officer of the cutter Thetis at Honolulu tells of the recent rescue of the second officer of one of the German ships interned at that port. The watch on the Thetis while looking at a small boat sailing about the harbor saw it suddenly overturn and sink, throwing the man who was in it into the water. The man was rescued and the place where the boat sank was buoyed. The next day it was raised.
